

EVB are awarded the Emma Humphreys Prize!

We are absolutely delighted to announce that we have been awarded The Emma Humphreys Prize for working to end men's violence. This is a highly prestigious award and valued by all who work to end violence against women and girls.

To have our work recognised in this way is incredibly rewarding and means that EVB can continue making a difference to the lives of those who experience domestic & sexual violence and abuse.

This award isn't just for us, but for all of you. All of you who write for us, share your experiences with us and who support us. It is also for the women who give their time freely to help run our service, alongside of their other commitments such as work and caring responsibilities.

We would like to thank the Emma Humphreys team, all of those who nominated us and most of all, those of you who place your trust in us when sharing your experiences of domestic & sexual violence and abuse.

We thank you for your continued support - we are in awe of your courage and resilience, against the seemingly never-ending victim blaming in our society. We can't do this without you - but together, we can make a difference.
