

Fundraiser: Donate £1 to keep EVB going!

EVB has been going now for 2 years this May!

We are completely unfunded and our very small admin team put in approximately 60 hours of volunteer work a week. We do this because we know our campaign has helped 100s of women, children and men. We have done several training sessions for front line staff working with victims of domestic and sexual violence and abuse which were priced only to cover costs as we understand the consequences of austerity cuts on women's services, civil service and local authorities. We have also started a small, independent publishing company to raise funds, but the start-up costs means it won't make a profit for at least another year.

We do need financial support to continue our campaign though.

If everyone of our followers donated just £1, we could run more training sessions for frontline staff and redevelop the website.

Alternately, you could purchase a copy of our first book Everyday Victim Blaming direct from the website!

You can also support our campaign raising awareness of victim blaming in the media by submitting to our website here. Sharing our posts and challenging news media via social media is also an important act of support for our campaign!

You can donate via the button on the right side or directly to paypal using this email address:
