

mommy dearest

I was contacted by another woman who has been abused by my brother, financially and emotionally. I've learned that he grooms women by presenting himself as the most amusing, charming and helpful person in the room, when the truth is he's a compulsive, manipulative, deceitful abuser of women and a fraudster, a thief.

I've wasted time blaming my father for his lack of compassion, patience, the decades of psychological abuse and my mother's biological father for the brief but disturbing sexual abuse.

I cut my mother out of my life for being dismissive, assuming, for being ignorant in her victim blaming. In her first thought being about "what's best all round" best for who?

Such a sad disappointing lack of closure when the police won't keep an incident report # for when I complained about the pedophile, for blocking communication and being unapproachable, for writing on my file "only complaining to get criminal compensation" wherein fact I felt it was appropriate to acknowledge my history of being an abused, and a neglected child and perhaps have police intelligence acknowledge profile and facilitate to keep an official record in case other victims might have needed to come forward and be believed. Therefore a "credible witness".

But most of all I blame myself for bailing him out of jail in 1986, so he could skip interstate and escalate his abhorrent deviant activities, exploiting those who might love him. Feeding his self-righteous anger by hurting others. Justifying his manipulative abusive behaviour, through false, twisted perceptions and allegations.

But where to from here? a current affair? a private investigator? therapy? move into "the court bar" permanently? the cheap bubbly is rather acceptable